A B. & O. Brakeman Run over at Thirty-third street

AND HIS BODY TERRIBLY MANGLED.

He Misses his Footing in Stepping upon the Engine and falls beneath the Wheels with Horrible Results. Leaves a Widow and Child.

Shortly after noon yesterday Robert Pugh, a brakeman in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company for some time past, met his death in a shocking manner at the B. & O. crossing at Thirty-third street, just in front of Schmulbach's brewery.

Pugh was on a flat car, and undertook to step to the engine, but just as he stepped upon it, it and the car lurched in opposite directions and he was thrown off. He fell to the track between the tender and car, but with the rarest presence of mind tried to crawl to a point where he could lie down and avoid the wheels. The train was too fast for him, and just as his hips were on the rail, the wheels struck him.

His abdomen was crushed and cut terribly, and his right leg crushed and mangled almost to the knee, while his left leg was severed.

The train was stopped and the mangled remains gathered up. Death ensued after a few minutes of awful agony. The body was taken in the patrol wagon tween the tender and car, but with the

Where Do the Bables Come From?

Where Do the Bables Come From?

The scene at Tappan & Connel's photograph gallery yesterday and the day before was one rarely seen in Wheeling. The enterprising firm advertised that they would make a picture free of each boy and girl baby under one year of age on Tue-day and Wednesday, and the result was that almost every mother, the result was that almost every mother, rich or poor, had her youngest up to pose before the camera. Tuesday was devoted to the baby girls, and there were exactly one hundred and seventy-eight of them had their pictures made. This was considered the high water mark, but the boy babies came up to two hundred and sixteen. This is the largest number of sittings on record ever made by one photographer in America in a day. This is a distinction Tappan & Connel justly deserve, for it is one of the most original ideas ever conceived and one which was due entirely to their own brain and enterprise. It was as good as a circus to see that congregation of infantile humanity.

The Thirty-eighth Anniversary of the Formation of the Local Turnverein Fittingly Celebrated --- A Large Crowd Present.

The field-day exercises of the Wheeling Turn Verein in celebration of its thirty-eighth anniversary took place yes-terday afternoon at Wheeling Park. At 11 o'clock in the morning the Turners arrived at the Elm Grove motor station, having paraded from the hall on North Market street, the Opera House band leading the way. The train was crowded with people. Arrived at the Park, all amused themselves with dancing until 3 o'clock, the hour set for until 3 o'clock, the hour set for the exercises. In the meantime every motor arriving was crowded with passengers, and when that hour arrived the mound, on the summit of which the athletic games were to be held, was covered with spectators. The apparatus was arranged in line, and for two hours and a half the exercises on the horizontal bar and parallel bars, high jumping and long distance jumping entertained the large audience. The scene was lively during this time, and the many graceful movements were seene was lively during this time, and the many graceful movements were loudly applauded. The Turners deserve great credit for the exhibit and Prof. Krogh, the instructor, nuch praise for the degree of proficiency to which he has brought his pupils. The various exercises were of the kind best calculated to develop all the muscles of the body and strengthen the frame.

THE PRIZES
to be awarded were distributed accordto be awarded were distributed according to points made at each apparatus. At the horizontal bar and the parallel bars, were three judges, the jumping ground being also presided over by the same number. As each member went through an exercise, the number of points scored was marked down by the judges. When the exercises were over, the auditing committee added up the points, and the one making the highest number got the first prize, the next on

THE REGULAR TURNING

having been finished, Messrs. Gus Mager and Chris Schambra gave a fine exhibition of pole vaulting. Height of jump, eight feet four inches. The athletic exhibition was concluded at about half past five o'clock, and after supper the dancing commenced. The large platform was occupied the remain-der of the evening by dancers, who never seemed to tire of this mode of athletic exercise. The Opera House Orchestra turnished the music. The path leading surnished the music. The path leading up to the top of the mound was hung with Chinese lanterns, and the mound itself was brightly illuminated. Up here the Opera House brass band discoursed, and the Verein had three or four barkeepers dispensing liquid refreshments. Everybody seemed to be enjoying themselves in a good natured way, and good-humored fun was the order of the day. Everything had been way, and good-flumored in was the order of the day. Everything had been well arranged, and too much credit cannot be given the amusement committee,

An Old Man Found Bleeding on the Side-At 2 o'clock this morning a little old ish man, with a thin face and gray mustache, was found lying of the sidewalk on Market street, with blood all about him on the payement and on his ciothes and face. The patrol wagon was sent for and he was taken to the city building and Dr. Spragg, the health officer, sum moned.

This man has been about town for several days on a spree. Nobody near last night knew him, but he was out early in the night in a gurney, and was drinking heavily. All that could be learned of the case was that he was seen by a passer-w lying on the pavement, and Officer Moran was called, and he summoned the patrol.

The popular theory on the spot was that the man had a hemorrhage of the lungs, but the fact was that he did not have a symptom of such an ailment. Somebody said he had bled from the ears, but if so all marks of bleeding had been removed.

The man carried an alligator leather satched wherever he went. This was found near him. He was not able to tell anything himself.

In the man's satchel was a letter from the police authorities of. Pitteburgh, addressed to John J. Heavy, and he had told somebodyhere recently that he was on his way home to Pittsburgh from Mt. Clemens, Mich. He was connected with a patent medicine concern in Pittsburgh.

Later developments prove what was moned.

Mt. Clemens, Aich. He was connected with a patent medicine concern in Fitts-burgh.

Later developments prove what was at first suspected to be true; the man was see alted and received the injuries who have prove fatal, at the hands hour, no definite information of the cause obtained.

At 3.15 a.m., Henry Butler, the gurney driver, was arrested by officer Moran. He said he had a dispute with the man about his fare, and the man threatened him, and reached toward his hip pocket when Butler, a mere boy, slapped him on the side of the head. He staggered and fell heavily to the pavement and lay there unconscious.

At 3.30 the man had recovered consciousness, but had not said anything. Dr. Spragg had not expressed an opinion as to the seriousness of his hurts.

dny's session of the editorial convention was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning. Andrew Putello, of Toronto, one of the Canadian delegation, extended greeting.

The first address of the day was by James W. Scott of the Chicago Herald, on the "Metropolitan Daily." He considered the problem of circulation, stereotype processes, printing from the soll, telegraph franchises and facilities, and advertising by the line.

A. C. Ochs, of the Chattanooga Times, followed with an address on the "Interior Daily." The size of the town in which such a paper could be published, he said, depends more on the man and location than on the population.
